Co. (Harry Tammen was a publisher of the Denver Post.) But many tourism entrepreneurs and operators of scenic attractions produced postals, which is why there are so many scenes of lodges and dining rooms. Anything was suitable for a postcard, whether there are pictures of people and animals, mountains and mountains, automobile roads, ranches, the day's catch of fish. You could buy postcards with drawings and advertisements, even poetry, on them. Postcards were cheap to buy and mail, and
